Empowerment

As the Folio goes to press, the Democratic Platform Committee has completed its work. The draft Platform to be presented to the Convention (see LISTINGS for dates and times of WBAI's special coverage of this summer's Democratic and Republic Presidential Conventions) shows the enormous impact of the Jesse Jackson campaign. It also shows what can be done by community and national organizing. WBAI has scheduled a number of programs looking at the issue of popular empowerment to enhance its convention coverage.

A major success of the Jackson campaign has been the creation of a national black voting bloc to which both parties will have to pay attention. The import of this is examined in two WBAI broadcasts:

The Jackson Effect

Black America is assessing the impact of the Jackson electoral campaign. It has muscle to flex and, therefore, has a good deal at stake at the Democratic Convention. One of the reasons for Jackson's success in reaching white voters may be that the issues that blacks have focused on—basically the struggle for economic justice—are also of primary concern to the former. Traditional issues such civil rights and racial justice were not neglected in the Jackson campaign, but the concerns that made the Jackson undertaking multi-racial and gave it such broad appeal were issues of class. What does all this mean?

Listen to Paul Robeson, Jr., a regular political analyst on WBAI and lecturer and commentator on black affairs, who will be joined by Mel Williamson, writer on political topics, in a discussion of the impact of Jesse Jackson on the Democratic Party. Mr. Williamson is writing a biography of William Allen, founder of the African Methodist Episcopal Church.

1:30 - 2:30 p.m. Friday July 1

Blacks Right Now: Better / Much Worse

Philadelphian Joyce Brooks says, "The better is better, okay? But the worst is much worse, for a larger group of people." She offers that summary of the state of black America in 1988. In hundreds of cities across the country, blacks hold important positions in politics, education, the media, business, and the courts. Their numbers fall far short of a fair share of these posts in proportion to the black population, but there has been a marked improvement over twenty years ago. So blacks have more power, but not enough to make meaningful change for the better for the black community. The black poor are in worse shape than they were twenty years ago. Why?

What has been learned? What are the new strategies for change? Here is a three-part documentary series, "Paradox of Power," which examines complex issues through the experience of blacks in Philadelphia.

July 1: "A Paradoxical Decade" features Dr. Thaddeus Mathis, noted expert on Philadelphia's black political movement; The ReverendPaul Washington; Eric King and Robert Sorrell of the Urban League; activists Joyce Brooks and Viola Sanders; Congressman Bill Gray—and more.

July 8: "A Generation of Pride and Power" features broadcasters Louise Williams and Stan Stovall, Claude Lewis of the "Philadelphia Inquirer", student Byron Edney; Oliver Franklin, City representative for arts and culture; Ernest Jones of the Urban Coalition; Barbara Daniel-Cox of the Minority Business Enterprise Council—and more.

July 15: "A Rising Tide?" features Elois Williams of the Philadelphia Council of Neighborhood Organizations; Tyrone Reed of the Committee for a Better North Philadelphia; Ralph Smith of the Philadelphia schools system; Councilwoman Augusta Clarke—and more.

Report to The Listener

By Vincent C. Thomas

The summer is upon us. Much of the energy we have come to call The New Activism will be coming to a head in the arena of electoral politics. WBAI and Pacifica will be covering the Democratic and Republican conventions with an eye toward the issues that concern the progressive community. This coverage will be all the more important because neither convention will provide a contested race or the possibility of a progressive candidacy for president. This means the brokering of issues will be more subtle and will certainly escape the ability of the beauty contest-oriented commercial media to ascertain. Pacifica's preparations become all the more important to disseminate the information you have been looking for.

As of this writing we have received almost 60% of the money pledged during our spring marathon. If you are one of those who has not honored your pledge yet, please do so. We estimate that we need over an 80% response in the next 30 days in order to meet our obligations for the summer. We know this is possible, so please help so that we can move forward with using this time to plan for the fall and the next year in an appropriate manner.

So till around Labor Day....enjoy!

DROUGHT-O-GRAM

Dear Listener-Sponsor,

The vagaries of the market economy, the greenhouse effect, and just plain lack of rain have contributed to a national drought of crisis proportions.

If our national leaders had known any better they would have asked us!

WBAI goes through a drought every summer . . . On the Great Plains it isn't raining rain and at your favorite community radio station IT ISN'T RAINING DOLLARS.

So we thought we'd save a few bucks on printing and postage by tightening up the Folio. With a few fewer pages we may even save a few trees along the way. The listings are as complete as ever, but some of the graphics and features that have appeared in recent issues aren't in this special summer double issue.

Have a pleasant summer. See you in the fall.

Meanwhile, you can help with a little metaphorical rain-dance of your own. Please clip the coupon on page 15 and send us a check for as many dollars as you can spare!

The Republican Convention

From August 15th to August 18th WBAI will offer enhanced coverage of the Republican Convention featuring a Morning Show live from New Orleans 7 am-8:30.

Evening coverage will begin at 7 pm, anchored by Larry Bensky, winner of the 1988 George Polk Award for Pacifica's coverage of the Iran/contra hearings last summer.

The Morning program will open with reports by Bensky, Ginny Berson, and Alan Fong. Each program will focus on issues emerging from the pervious evening's session. "Key Players" as well as rank-and-file delegates will be interviewed to assess the mood of the convention.

Bensky will also offer regular assessments if the media's coverage of issues, the candidates, and the spectacle. Nation magazine columnist Alexander Cockburn and Jeff Cohen, director of the liberal Fairness and Accuracy in Reporting (FAIR) will participate.

4:30 THROUGH THE OPERA GLASS. On the eve of the feast of "La Madonna di Mezz' Agosto," we present the historic complete performance of "Pagliacci" recorded under the personal supervision of the composer, Leoncavallo.
